You can also Google “nurses math help” and all kinds of resources will pop up or go to YOUTUBE and view a tutorial on the area in which you need help.

Please note this information came from suggested nurse's math websites and from student comments. Each test draws from a huge database of questions that are different for every student. You could have questions on all the kinds of math subjects below or only a few of them. Following are the kinds of math that students and various educational websites say are covered by Allied Health entry exams:

- Light algebra
- Convert from one system of measure to another using the metric, apothecary and household measurement system - example: gm to mg, mg to mcg, liters to quarts, ounces to pints, grams to ounces to pounds, cc to tbsp., etc. (try googling nurses math and Systems of Measurement and Approximate Equivalentents)
- Convert decimal to fraction
- Convert decimal to ratio
- Convert decimals to percents.
- Convert percents to decimals.
- Add, subtract, multiply and divide whole numbers.
- Add, subtract, multiply and divide fractions.
- Add, subtract, multiply and divide decimals.
- Set up and solve ratio and proportion problems.
- Convert fraction to decimal
- Rounding off decimals
- Improper and mixed fractions
- Military time
- Probability expressed as a percent
- Ratios and Proportions
- Ratio multiplication and subtraction
- Solve the equation
- Word-fraction vs. decimal
- Metric system
- Roman Numerals
